New Features at County Fair all Next Week

Workmen are busy this week getting everything in ship-shape condition for what promises to be an outstanding program as the final days near the 110th annual Oxford County Fair on September 11 through to the 15th.

Fairgoers, this year will see for themselves that the new slogan, "Everything Under the Sun, For Our Fair in '51," is no idle boast of the fair officials.

They will see animals, from Midway Mice to Trained Circus Elephants during the five days of the fair. A trip over the huge grounds will find every department filled to capacity, more cattle and sheep for the Livestock Show, more horses, oxen and steers for the pulling events, more exhibits in the Grange and 4-H Club department and more and better acts for the Grandstand Shows to be staged every afternoon and night.

One of the highlights of the five day show will be the first Market Lamb Sale staged on a Maine fairgrounds. This feature attraction will be held Thursday at 10 a. m. More than 40 Lambs, fitted for the sale by 4-H Club members, will be sold to the highest bidders. These bidders will be comprised of the buyers of many wholesale meat concerns of Lewiston, Portland, and other cities of the state.

The judging of the 4-H Market Lambs will be held on Wednesday morning and will attract a huge crowd of interested spectators.

Other Thursday features include the Maine Guernsey Breeders' Association Show, bringing herds of Guernseys from every section of Maine; the State-wide Sweepstakes pulling event which will bring to the Oxford fairgrounds the outstanding big teams of Maine to vie for the big purses; and the Cavalcade of Livestock, yearly feature of interest to all.

As in past years, Fair officials are turning over the opening day to the children of Oxford County. Young America's Day will feature various events especially for the young fry. Every child in the county will be the guest of the fair association. Schools in the various towns are arranging their schedules to give the children an opportunity to attend the opening day festivities.

4-H Club members will have their day on Friday when every 4-H'er will be admitted free to the grounds. The 4-H Dairy Show will be the highlight of Friday's program, with judging getting underway at 9 a. m. The H P Hood award will be made during the morning program. The annual Showmanship contest will be held at 11:30 a. m., when the Grand Champion 4-H cattle will be selected.

The afternoon program will feature the annual Cavalcade of 4-H animals on the half-mile race track. As the long line of Oxford County 4-H livestock is halted in front of the grandstand, an outstanding Oxford County boy and girl will be awarded the Mr and Mrs Ed Keller cash award. The presentation will be made on the big stage a mass from the grandstand.

Fair officials are proud to present this year the gala grandstand show featuring the Aerial Gymnastics in one of the most daring high trapeze acts of the country. Another feature of the seven-act stage show will be the Dorothy Jacobs Society Elephants, her 12 baby horse and trained dogs. Her 12 baby horse and trained dogs. Her 12 baby horse and trained dogs.

STATE CHAMBER IN FAVOR OF HIGHWAY BOND ISSUE

Maine's highway system and its lack of an effective improvement program is an economic bottleneck regarding the development of the state in all fields. This is the decision of the Board of Directors of the Maine State Chamber of Commerce.

After careful consideration of the effects of our "antiquated" system on commerce, industry, and the recreational field, the Chamber Board declared, "We are already unable to accommodate the increasing traffic flow created by more visitors and an expanding economy." The State of Maine cannot afford to impose limits upon its economic development, and this is certainly happening in the case of our highways.

The Chamber feels that everyone interested in the future of the State of Maine should be concerned over this problem and must seek a solution. And it points out that a major contribution to the solution is offered in the bond issue proposal which is Referendum Question No. 1 on the ballot September 10. Approval of this proposal by the people of the State, the State Chamber contends, will make possible a long range highway improvement program impossible under the present system, which has "outlived its usefulness."

Paul C. Emerson, Executive Manager, said that the Chamber, which represents all kinds of business and the professions, had discussed the highway problem and its possible solutions at a number of meetings including the annual meeting in Augusta last March.

In addition to the obvious benefits which the bond issue proposal can provide in construction, there is another important benefit which received the approval of the 95th Legislature. This benefit is the long-range program which lists the individual projects to be completed, and gives their priority as established from maintenance costs and traffic volume.

The State Chamber's Board has approved an information program designed to call attention to the fact that the highway improvement program is sound business policy for the State. As a further step toward a sound fiscal policy the Board endorsed support of the proposal approved by the 95th Legislature to make all measures approved by the people temporarily operative unless adequate funds are also provided. This question will be found on the ballot as Proposed Constitutional Amendment No. 4.

Pointing to an increasing stream of traffic from the State to serve as the Annual Fair, and the greater need for adequate roads, the Chamber also will stress through its activities that approval should be given to Proposed Constitutional Amendment No. 4, which reaffirms the right to vote of people absent from the State or physically handicapped.

Robert Greenleaf has returned to Gorham to resume his teaching duties.

E. O. Ionnas and son, Harold Jr., visited relatives in Harmony, Sunday.

Stanley Carter of Limestone recently visited his mother, Mrs. Fannie Carter.

Carlton Brown and John Willard are visiting in Boston several days this week.

Mrs. Paul Brown and two children of Augusta visited relatives in town last week.

Mr and Mrs Ernest Phillips and daughter, Harriet, were guests during the week end of her parents, Mr and Mrs Philip Tapp.

Bernice Robinson Dodge has accepted nomination of officers at the regular meeting Monday. Plans are under way for installation which will be in early October.

Young friends enjoyed a birthday party with friends last at his home on Wednesday. Tonight was seven. There were party and a winner.

An Atheist Teaching Teachers

An impressioned letter just received from the mother of two college age sons has disturbed me deeply. "I have one son," she writes, "who attended both a church-supported school and a State college. He came out of both schools believing there was something fundamental wrong with the American way of life and that something must be done to remedy it. Try as hard as I could I have not been able to erase these thoughts from his mind. If he had any teaching at all, he would strengthen his faith in this country and help him appreciate it. I could never tell it."

I have another son who is now attending a State teachers college. Last year he had an atheist as his English teacher. This same teacher taught a week's course of atheism during the summer of 1949. He was the only one of his kind in the country. He was the only one of his kind in the country. He was the only one of his kind in the country.

Religion Condemned

The essay, "The atheist," was the most frank and direct Communist propaganda that I have ever read. The very subject itself, despite the fact that the teacher was a Communist, was a masterpiece of propaganda. The teacher was a Communist. The teacher was a Communist. The teacher was a Communist.

I am not alluding to the fact that the atheist was a Communist. I am alluding to the fact that the atheist was a Communist. I am alluding to the fact that the atheist was a Communist. I am alluding to the fact that the atheist was a Communist. I am alluding to the fact that the atheist was a Communist.

On Academic Freedom

Every American college youth should know all there is to know about Communism and Socialism. It is not an abstract idea which might be used to convert the student to the cause of some other collection of ideas. It is a concrete reality which is a threat to the life of the individual. It is a threat to the life of the individual. It is a threat to the life of the individual.

Communism is a threat to the life of the individual. It is a threat to the life of the individual. It is a threat to the life of the individual. It is a threat to the life of the individual. It is a threat to the life of the individual.

Unborn Infant Needed

My sister, a nurse, says she has seen a child who was born with a very rare condition. The child was born with a very rare condition. The child was born with a very rare condition. The child was born with a very rare condition. The child was born with a very rare condition.

Know How To Be Thankful

MRS. M. NORTHRUP, N. Y., is a courageous woman. Read on and see if your courage would sustain you if you had to experience all she went through.

First, her husband who had held a responsible position in a bank which served a large area of wealthy farmers and small town folk, and who was on the school board, active in civic and church work in various capacities, as well as being much-liked and respected in the community, suddenly, after ten years of building up his prestige, found himself out of a job when his bank closed practically overnight.

Not only was his job gone, but due to loans he himself had made at the bank his respect was injured. Worst of all, many unpleasant and unfounded remarks were made about him. Then for years he found only odd jobs to do for short periods of time. He was nearing middle-age and that was the reason for many of his rebuffs when applying for work. Mrs. Northrup taught school to keep the family going, but this only tended to increase Mr. Northrup's feeling of inferiority. Finally he got a position, at $150 a month—most inadequate for their needs and certainly not enough to bolster his morale. But he worked hard and developed the department where he held his position.

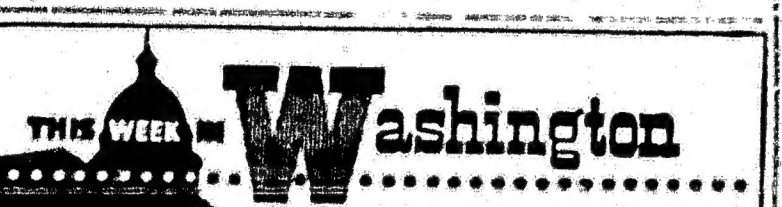

Then came a series of physical ailments, no doubt the direct result of his mental difficulties. By and by, he resorted to drink. He turned against his wife, and would leave home for days at a time, returning each time to plead for forgiveness. Eventually he found his burden too heavy to carry and laid down his life.

Mrs. Northrup who had struggled to carry her family's responsibilities, and had worked hard to build up her husband's morale suddenly felt that it had all been absolutely futile. She had loved her husband and she didn't want to go on without him, although she had the child to live for. She cast no blame on the one who had made her life so difficult. She was even glad she had married him rather than one of the other men she might have married.

So on this she built her future. On this she built her young son's morale, who never seemed to feel the slightest criticism of his father. (Mrs. Northrup says she was grateful to her child for that.)

So she started anew, is still teaching, renting rooms and making a home for young college girls who she feels should have a homelike place, and doing all she can to bring happiness into her son's life.

But where her courage looms up greatest is in her remark that she has had so much more to be thankful for than so many people she knows.

SURPRISINGLY, the administration military aid bill went through the House without much fuss or the heavy lobbying which had been anticipated. However, with the new Republican charges of "utter failure" of the administration foreign policy in the MacArthur "infidelity" report, it is expected that some fireworks will result when debate opens in the Senate.

The Senate Joint Armed Services and Foreign Relations Committee which had made the MacArthur investigation had voted not to file a report, to let the matter drop, since most every word of testimony except some very secret military matters had been made public and the American people had a chance to make up their own minds. But some of the GOP members saw a chance to make some political hay, so they got up the report which made public criticism of the President and the administration foreign policy as a result of the MacArthur matter.

Senator Wayne Morse of Oregon, however, refused to sign the GOP document, declaring the President was justified in firing MacArthur, and, as a matter of fact, it was the President's duty to do so. Also Senator Leverett Saltonstall of Massachusetts sought to pour oil over the troubled waters, although he was one of the signers of the document. But it appeared the administration may take up the challenge and make an issue of the MacArthur matter, since that is what the GOP apparently seeks. So we may be hearing more and more about MacArthur, as he appeared headed for a Senate committee or some other such post.

A flurry of flood control bills and some interesting legislation in favor of the Missouri valley authority came to the table of the recent House in Missouri and Kansas. Senator James A. Eastland of Mississippi, although working to get through what is known as the Flood Act, has come in for some criticism by members of a House public works subcommittee. Congressman Clark Mages of Missouri, a member of the committee, has quickly charged private power companies which create the false impression that it belongs to and belongs according to the American way of life and then converts to going and imitating minds the lives and minds of an alien philosophy.

I believe, of course, that the great majority of American teachers are devoted to the American way of life. However, there are so many instances like those described by the mother who is concerned for her son's future that we must also recognize there is great danger in the country where teachers choose to undermine the fundamentals of our American way of life. With Mr. Eastland, I feel strongly that the presence of such influences should be known to the parents.

How empty learning, how vain is art, but as it mends the life and softens the heart. —Young

Economic Highlights

Happenings That Affect the Future of Every Individual — National and International Problems Inseparable From Local Welfare.

General Eisenhower is willing to run for the Presidency. His pick is the Republican ticket, but, failing that, he'll run as a Democrat if the nomination is offered. And it is possible that he could be persuaded to run as a third party candidate.

That in the gist of a very interesting article by Harold Lavine, a New York editor, which is the lead story of the September American Mercury.

According to it, General Eisenhower will not announce his intentions so long as he wears the uniform. Short of war, he will complete his job of getting Western Europe's military program rolling early next year. At that time, a declaration may be expected.

General Eisenhower didn't always feel this way, says Mr. Lavine. He honestly didn't want to be President or anything else that would keep him solidly in the public eye. He wanted to retire and take it fairly easy. The job as head of Columbia University looked like just what the doctor ordered. But, administration came quickly. Eisenhower found that, like all university efforts, he must give his principal efforts to raising money. As Mr. Lavine puts it, "He was a roving salesman and a professional after-dinner speaker, and didn't enjoy it a bit."

Apparently he now realizes that he will be a public figure all his life, regardless of personal inclinations, and so, as one of his friends has said, "He might as well go out for the big job." His military reputation is, of course, completely secure. And most important of all, writes Mr. Lavine, "Eisenhower believes in the policy the United States is pursuing in Europe with an almost religious fervor. In his mind, it's a crusade. He would consider the election of Republican Senator Robert A. Taft or someone holding the same ideas concerning foreign policy as nothing short of a national and world catastrophe."

Eisenhower support within the Republican party is potent and it has joined together on this point certain men whose dislike for each other has been proverbial. As an example, it has been reliably reported that Governor Dewey and Senator Taft, sworn political enemies, have agreed to work for the General's nomination. Harold Stassen is for him. And so are such powerful men as Governor Warren and Senators Saltonstall and Lodge.

What are the Eisenhower views on the big issues? They are clearly known to all in the matter of foreign policy and the Western military build-up. On domestic issues, much less is known about his thinking. Mr. Lavine says this: "Given a choice between the Republican and Democratic nominations, Eisenhower would grab the former. On domestic issues, he thinks far more like a Republican than a Democrat. Though he may favor certain of the New Deal policies, he dislikes the philosophy of paternalism which the New Deal represents."

If Mr. Lavine is correct in his convincing appraisal of the Eisenhower attitude, a first-class scrap is in the making. Senator Taft now leads for the GOP nomination, and he too has powerful supporters. He and Eisenhower differ enormously in many respects but they have certain characteristics in common — high abilities, a willingness to fight to the last ditch for their causes, unshakable faith in the rightness of their beliefs. Both have something which seems to be rare in public life these days — character. If these men go to the mat after the Republican nomination, or if they run for the Presidency on opposed tickets, the nation will witness a real battle on the high level of principle.

Elmer, N. J., Times: "It is agreeable to observe at this late date — 34 years after the tragic establishment of Communism in Russia — that the United States Government is fully and amply clothed with constitutional powers to protect itself at all times . . . against the threat of imported anarchy and revolution. The power of the government to defend itself — and the people against violence and terrorism — no way conflicts with the protections of free speech and free press guaranteed to law-abiding citizens under the Bill of Rights."

REID STATE PARK TO A GREAT EXTENT STILL UNDEVELOPED

Those who visit the new Reid State Park on the outskirts of Georgetown for the first time leave it with mixed emotions.

The opinion is unanimous that this 1,200 acre tract, the great gift of Walter E. Reid to the citizens of Maine, is one of the most magnificent coastal areas along the entire Atlantic coast, one whose recreational possibilities and scenic values are almost inexhaustible.

You drive to a parking area not more than fifty yards from a mile-long beach of clean sand washed by the uncontaminated waters of the open Atlantic. A salt water lagoon of several acres in extent, warmed by the sun, offers safe bathing for the very young, for the inexperienced and for those who like warmer water than the open ocean provides. On the opposite side of the parking area there is a little bay, protected by reefs, where gently sloping sands form yet another safe playground for tots.

At one end of the mile-long beach a coastal ledge rises gently to a height of fifty feet or more making a natural grandstand for those who want to just sit and watch the swimmers or to enjoy a picnic lunch while looking out to sea.

The beach itself is ideal for swimming. The sand is hard-packed and long, lazy rollers provide the very best of surf bathing. The view from almost any point in the park is beautiful beyond description.

All this is what the casual visitor sees at Reid Park. What only a few see, and fewer know about, is that a still greater area lies undeveloped and inaccessible. To go to it you have to walk the length of Mile Beach where you not only find another beach half a mile long but also the sandy Little River which offers several miles of the most excellent bathing, particularly for youngsters. This magnificent part of the Park will remain virtually inaccessible until a road that will cost close to $100,000 is built.

So much for the natural assets of this wonderful place that is owned by the people of Maine.

On the debit side is the lack of facilities that has been all too evident on past week ends when the weather has been fine and over 2,500 people have been in the Park and another 1,000 have been turned away.

The Park lacks adequate parking facilities. It has no bathhouses so that bathers must come prepared for swimming or must don their bathing suits in their cars. The toilet facilities and the fresh water supply are inadequate. These shortcomings are only a minor annoyance on week days but on week-ends they cause discomfort and inconvenience.

This state of affairs is a cause of grave concern to Walter E. Reid, who lives near the Park's entrance and who has a chance to observe and talk to those who visit the area.

Developed to its utmost potential

GILEAD

Mrs. Florence Holder, Corres., — John Watson of Springfield, Mass., spent the holidays with his niece, Mrs. Florence Holder.

Mr. and Mrs. Amedee Fiset returned home Saturday after spending their vacation with relatives in Louisville, Kentucky, Washington, D. C., and New York City.

Fred Leighton has returned to Gray to the home of his sister, Mrs. Josephine Coie.

Mrs. Hilda O'Brien and children of Gorham spent the holidays with Mrs. F. M. Holder.

The village school opened Tuesday with Mrs. Frances Bennett of Bethel as teacher.

Albert Pierce of Falmouth and Edward Evans of Cumberland were guests of Mrs. Florence Holder Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wight attended Oxford Pomona Grange at Upton Tuesday.

out that the Park could accommodate tens of thousands of people who could park their thousands of cars easily. Clean, adequate facilities for dressing and comfort would make the Park one of the outstanding recreational areas on the continent.

He is impatient that the state does not see its way clear to go forward with their entire development at once so that Maine people and their summer guests may enjoy the fullest facilities of the Park without delay. He is not in favor of the 21 cents plus four cents tax admission fee that is charged by the state claiming that it imposes a burden on those with large families and small incomes.

To understand his viewpoint it is necessary to understand the man himself. A poor Georgetown boy, he left Maine to become internationally famous in industry and business, principally in the automotive and shipping business.

Leaving Maine and his people he long ago decided to make a highly valuable gift to his native state and began acquiring the property that is now Reid Park. He has resisted all offers, some of them highly attractive, by private interests who wanted to purchase some of his holdings before he turned them in to the people of Maine. The value of the whole tract, particularly in terms of the future, is incalculable. It is beyond what he wants to see his dream of tens of thousands of his fellow citizens enjoying the Park to the fullest come true in as short a time as possible.

Governor Frederick G. Payne and State Park Commission Director Harold J. Dyer think it is possible to develop the undeveloped part of the Park without cost to the taxpayer by following the procedure of New Hampshire and other states.

Money is raised by a bond issue and the bonds are amortized from admittance fees. An act of the Maine legislature is necessary to carry out this plan and such a move would find much favor with a great many people. It would impose no tax burden on Maine's already heavily-taxed people. The present admission fee, or even a lower fee, would pay for the further development it is believed.

So far as adding facilities or improvements to the part of the Park now open, Director Dyer says that plans will be complete in two weeks for an improved water system and for a building to house toilets and dressing rooms. Work will be started next spring but unless there is a lifting of restrictions on building before that time the completion of the Park will have to wait until a future date.

That, then, is the status of Reid Park at the moment. In the final analysis its future is in the hands of the people of Maine. If they are content to let it remain in its partially completed state then that is the way it will remain. If, however, they want a Park that will be the pride and joy of everyone they will have to make their wishes known to the legislators who will translate it into action.

One thing that should be borne in mind is that Reid Park is a people's park, one to be enjoyed by every citizen from the richest to the humblest.

An alarming situation exists in Maine. More and more of our desirable recreational property is being bought by private interests and the day is not distant when we will be barred from enjoying our own state except in areas that are to be used for public enjoyment.

That is why the future of Reid Park is of such tremendous importance to all Maine people.

When we take advantage of public areas and develop them to their fullest, we will have no right to complain if the day comes when the most desirable parts of Maine are barred from the common citizen forever.

It is therefore in the interests of every citizen of Maine to see Reid Park so that its potential greatness can be evaluated by all citizens.

It is reached by taking Route 127 at the Woodville end of the Bath Bridge. The distance from that point to the end of the peninsula is a little over ten miles. It is near the end of the peninsula that makes its way out to sea south of Bethel.

FREEZING PEACHES THIS YEAR?

"Peaches discolor readily," says Mrs Ruth DeCoteau, Home Demonstration Agent, of Oxford County, "and they will turn dark during the freezing storage or as soon as they are exposed to the air, unless they are especially treated. The addition of ascorbic acid directly to the sugar syrup will help prevent this or you can use a citric acid dip if you prefer. The citric acid dip is done before packing syrup or dry sugar, while the ascorbic acid is added directly to the sugar syrup."

1. Dip fully ripe sound peaches about 15 to 30 seconds in boiling water to loosen skins. The riper the fruit, the less scalding is needed.

2. Chill quickly in cold water 15 to 30 seconds. This stops the cooking action.

3. Slip off skins, pit and cut in sections. Handle fruit quickly to prevent darkening.

4. If using citric acid dip, place fruit at once in cold solution (1/2 teaspoon citric acid dissolved in 1 quart water) for 1 to 2 minutes. Drain and fill containers to within one inch from top.

5. Pack in 1 part by weight of sugar, to 3 or 4 parts by weight of fruit (1 cup sugar to 4 1/2 to 6 cups fruit).

6. When packing fruits in dry sugar, be sure to mix thoroughly until all sugar is dissolved and sufficient syrup is formed to cover the fruit when packed. If necessary press fruit down in package until syrup covers the fruit.

7. If you prefer a syrup a 50% to 60% syrup solution is often used.

Crookedness in Government

Recently, a group of 90 Cadets were expelled from West Point for cheating in examinations. These young men regarded as the cream of the present generation, have high scholastic records, come from good families and were chosen from thousands to carry on the traditions of one of the oldest and finest military schools in this country.

The boys cheated, they admit it, and charge in defense that others also cheated. They forget that two wrongs do not make one right. If this attitude prevails among these Cadets generally, and we believe it does, it offers a startling and vivid indictment of our present system of education, our philosophy of government, and the thinking of our people.

New methods of education introduced during the past three decades slanted to the Socialistic and Communistic viewpoint have failed in the one essential that has made this country great, namely, the building and development of character.

During the same period, our National Government has placed a premium on relief, boozedogging, graft and criminal neglect as a device to perpetuate itself in office.

The Halls of Congress and the White House have become a three ring circus where many of our laws were sic with each other to submitting legislation designed to perpetuate the nation.

With education taking two strides on the legs before they get started and our government setting an example of crookedness and graft. It is surprising that the life time is so small. If these bright young men the cream of the present crop are an example of our act comes direct to the Oxford Fair from the famed Cole Bros. Circus and is heralded as the finest act of its kind in the country. Oxford Fair officials boast that this Maine fair is the only one in the state this year to present a trained elephant act in front of the grandstand.

The stage show will be presented nightly at 8 p. m. and each of the seven acts is guaranteed to provide entertainment of the finest quality.

The Kling Reid Shows will be in full operation each night following the hour and a half-long stage show. Once again the noted showman of the East is presenting the most modern rides and shows for the fair patrons.

Both floors of the big exhibition hall will remain open every evening of the fair. The Better Homes Exposition of '51 on the first floor will be filled to capacity with home appliances and equipment to make easier living in '51. Local business firms have taken every available inch of space in the big hall to display their merchandise in modern booths.

The second floor of the hall will be devoted to the Grange exhibits, 4-H Club department, Future Homemakers of America, Future Farmers of America, the Parlor, Norway Garden Club Flower Show and as usual the hand craft of local craftsmen. Fruits and vegetables will also have a prominent spot in the hall.

The harness racing will get underway daily at 1:30 p. m. with the pari-mutuel booths again under the supervision of Frank Witman.

1951 MAINE REGISTER BOASTS NEW FEATURES

The Maine Register for 1951 is now being delivered.

As usual many changes have been made to make the book more useful. The various county officers and court information which have always appeared in the miscellaneous section in the front of the book now also appear at the beginning of each county.

In answer to numerous requests from individuals and corporations from various parts of the country, new statistical information has been added to give a partial picture of our industries and principal farm crops. The short space of time available prevented the publishers from presenting as much information as desired, as many of the statistics were not readily available by counties. It is hoped that by another year the scope of this information can be broadened materially.

Each county has a brief story of its characteristics covering briefly its physical features, transportation, housing, manufacturing, farming, community and recreational facilities.

New information has been added regarding the various colleges showing the enrollment, estimated costs at each, and the number of the faculty.

The Maine Register is the oldest publication of its kind in the country and probably in the world. The first issue was in 1820, but prior to that date was known as the Massachusetts Register, the first issue of which was in 1800. The early registers were vest-pocket size and listed the state officers, salaries, notaries and members of the militia. Gradually changes were made in content and size to the present book of over 1200 pages.

Editing, compiling and securing information is quite a task, and would take one person over three years, not considering the time spent in the printing.

The publishers, Fred L. Tower Company of Portland, have been publishing the Maine Register for the past 33 years as well as a similar book for New Hampshire.

A little learning is a dangerous thing; drink deep, or taste not the Pierian spring; there shallow draughts intoxicate the brain, and drinking largely sobers us again.
